THE COMPILER.

MONDAY, NOV. 16, 1866.

The Arkansas Ticket, or Union Ticket, did not meet the public sentiment in the Congressional election of 1866. The Democratic sweep was complete. The Republicans had won but one seat in the United States Senate. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election of 1866 was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.

The election of 1866 was a close one. The Republicans had the advantage in the election, but the Democrats had the advantage in the Congressional election. The Republican candidate in the Congressional election was Horatio G. Redfield, who was elected. The Democratic candidate was J. H. Brough, who was defeated.