LETTER FROM JOHN C. SULLIVAN.-

Mr. Fugitive’s account of a visit to Moscow, Paris, and London, under the title of "Travel in Europe," has afforded me much satisfaction. I have always felt that the works of Mr. Fugitive are among the best of their kind, and that his travels are well worth reading. In his recent work, Mr. Fugitive has shown a remarkable power of observation, and has given us a glimpse of the life and manners of the people of Europe, which is sure to be interesting to all who are interested in the affairs of the world.

I was pleased to learn that Mr. Fugitive had visited Moscow, and that he had seen a great deal of the city, and had been able to get a good idea of its character. I have always been interested in the history of Moscow, and I am glad to hear that Mr. Fugitive has been able to study its past and present condition. I am glad to hear also that Mr. Fugitive has visited Paris, and has had the opportunity to study its history and its art. I have always been interested in the history of Paris, and I am glad to hear that Mr. Fugitive has been able to study its past and present condition.

I am glad to hear that Mr. Fugitive has visited London, and that he has been able to study its history and its art. I have always been interested in the history of London, and I am glad to hear that Mr. Fugitive has been able to study its past and present condition.

Mr. Fugitive has described the character of the people of Europe, and has given us a glimpse of their manners and customs. I am glad to hear that Mr. Fugitive has been able to study the character of the people of Europe, and that he has given us a good idea of their manners and customs.

In conclusion, I am glad to hear that Mr. Fugitive has visited Europe, and that he has been able to study its history and its art. I am glad to hear that Mr. Fugitive has given us a good idea of the character of the people of Europe, and that he has given us a good idea of their manners and customs. I am sure that Mr. Fugitive’s work will be of great interest to all who are interested in the affairs of the world.
