FREDERICK DOUGLASS' PAPER.

October 5, 1845.

Published at the office of Frederick Douglass, N. 1232 Market Street, Washington, D.C.

To the Editor of the Washington Daily Times:

I have read with great interest your recent article on the subject of slavery in the United States. As a former slave myself, I am deeply concerned with the issue of freedom and justice for all people. I believe that the time has come for us to stand together and fight for a better future. Let us not be afraid to speak the truth and to be heard. For only through unity and strength can we achieve our goals.

Sincerely,

Frederick Douglass

NATIONAL CONVENTION OF THE LIBERTY PARTY.

The National Convention of the Liberty Party met in Washington, D.C., on October 5, 1845. The convention was attended by representatives from various states, including Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio. The convention's main focus was on the issue of slavery and the need for immediate emancipation. The delegates discussed various strategies for achieving this goal, including the use of armed resistance and the formation of a national army. The convention ended with the adoption of a resolution calling for the immediate emancipation of all enslaved people in the United States.
