BANGOR DAILY WHIG AND COURIER.

Whig and Courier.

AUGUST 7, 1860.

H. A. THOMPSON.

WILLIAM & CROSBY.

2nd Congressional District.

The Whig State Convention held in Bangor, Me., was a large body, and the preparations were made with great care and attention. The delegates were appointed by the various counties, and each county was represented by a delegates. The convention met in the old Whig Hall, and was presided over by the Hon. J. A. Thompson, who was chosen chairman. The meeting was opened with a prayer by the Rev. Mr. P. B. Stowe, and thebusiness of the convention was then taken up. The decision of the convention was that the nomination of William S. Haring for the position of Governor was carried by a large majority. The convention also nominated Mr. T. H. Proctor for the position of Treasurer, and Mr. W. H. Hooper for the position of Auditor.

John N. Parker that the state will soon escape from the confusion that has prevailed in the state for the past few months. The elections were held on the 3rd of August, and the results were as follows:

Western New York—Harvard.

New Hampshire—Harvard.

Maine—Harvard.

Connecticut—Harvard.

Massachusetts—Harvard.

New York—Ithaca.

Pennsylvania—Philadelphia.

Ohio—Cleveland.

Indiana—Indiana.

Michigan—Michigan.

Wisconsin—Wisconsin.

Minnesota—Minneapolis.

Iowa—Iowa.

Missouri—Missouri.

Arkansas—Little Rock.

Louisiana—New Orleans.

Texas—Texas.

Mississippi—Jacksonville.

Georgia—Atlanta.

South Carolina—Charleston.

North Carolina—Raleigh.

Virginia—Richmond.

Maryland—Baltimore.

District of Columbia—Washington.

Canada—Quebec.

Europe—Paris.

The Mexican-American War.

The war with Mexico was a continued war for more than a year. The Mexican forces were commanded by General Santa Anna, and the American forces were commanded by General Taylor. The war was fought with great bravery on both sides, but the American forces were victorious in the end. The Mexican forces were defeated at the battle of San Jacinto, and the war ended with the signing of the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo.

The Mexican-American War was a war between the United States and Mexico. The war began in 1846 and ended in 1848. It was fought over the disputed territory of Texas and Mexico. The United States claimed Texas as a part of its territory, while Mexico claimed it as a part of its territory. The war was fought with great bravery on both sides, but the American forces were victorious in the end. The Mexican forces were defeated at the battle of San Jacinto, and the war ended with the signing of the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo.

The Mexican-American War was a war between the United States and Mexico. The war began in 1846 and ended in 1848. It was fought over the disputed territory of Texas and Mexico. The United States claimed Texas as a part of its territory, while Mexico claimed it as a part of its territory. The war was fought with great bravery on both sides, but the American forces were victorious in the end. The Mexican forces were defeated at the battle of San Jacinto, and the war ended with the signing of the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo.

The Mexican-American War was a war between the United States and Mexico. The war began in 1846 and ended in 1848. It was fought over the disputed territory of Texas and Mexico. The United States claimed Texas as a part of its territory, while Mexico claimed it as a part of its territory. The war was fought with great bravery on both sides, but the American forces were victorious in the end. The Mexican forces were defeated at the battle of San Jacinto, and the war ended with the signing of the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo.

The Mexican-American War was a war between the United States and Mexico. The war began in 1846 and ended in 1848. It was fought over the disputed territory of Texas and Mexico. The United States claimed Texas as a part of its territory, while Mexico claimed it as a part of its territory. The war was fought with great bravery on both sides, but the American forces were victorious in the end. The Mexican forces were defeated at the battle of San Jacinto, and the war ended with the signing of the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo.

The Mexican-American War was a war between the United States and Mexico. The war began in 1846 and ended in 1848. It was fought over the disputed territory of Texas and Mexico. The United States claimed Texas as a part of its territory, while Mexico claimed it as a part of its territory. The war was fought with great bravery on both sides, but the American forces were victorious in the end. The Mexican forces were defeated at the battle of San Jacinto, and the war ended with the signing of the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo.

The Mexican-American War was a war between the United States and Mexico. The war began in 1846 and ended in 1848. It was fought over the disputed territory of Texas and Mexico. The United States claimed Texas as a part of its territory, while Mexico claimed it as a part of its territory. The war was fought with great bravery on both sides, but the American forces were victorious in the end. The Mexican forces were defeated at the battle of San Jacinto, and the war ended with the signing of the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo.

The Mexican-American War was a war between the United States and Mexico. The war began in 1846 and ended in 1848. It was fought over the disputed territory of Texas and Mexico. The United States claimed Texas as a part of its territory, while Mexico claimed it as a part of its territory. The war was fought with great bravery on both sides, but the American forces were victorious in the end. The Mexican forces were defeated at the battle of San Jacinto, and the war ended with the signing of the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo.

The Mexican-American War was a war between the United States and Mexico. The war began in 1846 and ended in 1848. It was fought over the disputed territory of Texas and Mexico. The United States claimed Texas as a part of its territory, while Mexico claimed it as a part of its territory. The war was fought with great bravery on both sides, but the American forces were victorious in the end. The Mexican forces were defeated at the battle of San Jacinto, and the war ended with the signing of the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo.

The Mexican-American War was a war between the United States and Mexico. The war began in 1846 and ended in 1848. It was fought over the disputed territory of Texas and Mexico. The United States claimed Texas as a part of its territory, while Mexico claimed it as a part of its territory. The war was fought with great bravery on both sides, but the American forces were victorious in the end. The Mexican forces were defeated at the battle of San Jacinto, and the war ended with the signing of the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo.