Boston Journal.

The President of the United States.

The President's Annual Message. (Part II.)

The President's annual message has been received and laid before the Senate and House of Representatives. It is a constitutional right which the public have a right to expect and demand of the executive department. The President's message is an opportunity for the public to learn the state of the Union, and to know what the President desires to see done in the next session of Congress. It is also a means of informing the public of the state of the Union, and of the measures which the President proposes to take in order to carry out the will of the people. The President's message is also an opportunity for the public to learn what the President desires to see done in the next session of Congress. It is also a means of informing the public of the state of the Union, and of the measures which the President proposes to take in order to carry out the will of the people.

RECRUITS FOR THE UNION.

The President's Message. (Part II.)

The President's message has been received and laid before the Senate and House of Representatives. It is a constitutional right which the public have a right to expect and demand of the executive department. The President's message is an opportunity for the public to learn the state of the Union, and to know what the President desires to see done in the next session of Congress. It is also a means of informing the public of the state of the Union, and of the measures which the President proposes to take in order to carry out the will of the people.

RECRUITS FOR THE UNION.

The President's message has been received and laid before the Senate and House of Representatives. It is a constitutional right which the public have a right to expect and demand of the executive department. The President's message is an opportunity for the public to learn the state of the Union, and to know what the President desires to see done in the next session of Congress. It is also a means of informing the public of the state of the Union, and of the measures which the President proposes to take in order to carry out the will of the people.

RECRUITS FOR THE UNION.

The President's message has been received and laid before the Senate and House of Representatives. It is a constitutional right which the public have a right to expect and demand of the executive department. The President's message is an opportunity for the public to learn the state of the Union, and to know what the President desires to see done in the next session of Congress. It is also a means of informing the public of the state of the Union, and of the measures which the President proposes to take in order to carry out the will of the people.

RECRUITS FOR THE UNION.

The President's message has been received and laid before the Senate and House of Representatives. It is a constitutional right which the public have a right to expect and demand of the executive department. The President's message is an opportunity for the public to learn the state of the Union, and to know what the President desires to see done in the next session of Congress. It is also a means of informing the public of the state of the Union, and of the measures which the President proposes to take in order to carry out the will of the people.

RECRUITS FOR THE UNION.

The President's message has been received and laid before the Senate and House of Representatives. It is a constitutional right which the public have a right to expect and demand of the executive department. The President's message is an opportunity for the public to learn the state of the Union, and to know what the President desires to see done in the next session of Congress. It is also a means of informing the public of the state of the Union, and of the measures which the President proposes to take in order to carry out the will of the people.

RECRUITS FOR THE UNION.

The President's message has been received and laid before the Senate and House of Representatives. It is a constitutional right which the public have a right to expect and demand of the executive department. The President's message is an opportunity for the public to learn the state of the Union, and to know what the President desires to see done in the next session of Congress. It is also a means of informing the public of the state of the Union, and of the measures which the President proposes to take in order to carry out the will of the people.

RECRUITS FOR THE UNION.

The President's message has been received and laid before the Senate and House of Representatives. It is a constitutional right which the public have a right to expect and demand of the executive department. The President's message is an opportunity for the public to learn the state of the Union, and to know what the President desires to see done in the next session of Congress. It is also a means of informing the public of the state of the Union, and of the measures which the President proposes to take in order to carry out the will of the people.

RECRUITS FOR THE UNION.

The President's message has been received and laid before the Senate and House of Representatives. It is a constitutional right which the public have a right to expect and demand of the executive department. The President's message is an opportunity for the public to learn the state of the Union, and to know what the President desires to see done in the next session of Congress. It is also a means of informing the public of the state of the Union, and of the measures which the President proposes to take in order to carry out the will of the people.

RECRUITS FOR THE UNION.

The President's message has been received and laid before the Senate and House of Representatives. It is a constitutional right which the public have a right to expect and demand of the executive department. The President's message is an opportunity for the public to learn the state of the Union, and to know what the President desires to see done in the next session of Congress. It is also a means of informing the public of the state of the Union, and of the measures which the President proposes to take in order to carry out the will of the people.

RECRUITS FOR THE UNION.

The President's message has been received and laid before the Senate and House of Representatives. It is a constitutional right which the public have a right to expect and demand of the executive department. The President's message is an opportunity for the public to learn the state of the Union, and to know what the President desires to see done in the next session of Congress. It is also a means of informing the public of the state of the Union, and of the measures which the President proposes to take in order to carry out the will of the people.

RECRUITS FOR THE UNION.

The President's message has been received and laid before the Senate and House of Representatives. It is a constitutional right which the public have a right to expect and demand of the executive department. The President's message is an opportunity for the public to learn the state of the Union, and to know what the President desires to see done in the next session of Congress. It is also a means of informing the public of the state of the Union, and of the measures which the President proposes to take in order to carry out the will of the people.

RECRUITS FOR THE UNION.

The President's message has been received and laid before the Senate and House of Representatives. It is a constitutional right which the public have a right to expect and demand of the executive department. The President's message is an opportunity for the public to learn the state of the Union, and to know what the President desires to see done in the next session of Congress. It is also a means of informing the public of the state of the Union, and of the measures which the President proposes to take in order to carry out the will of the people.