RALEIGH REGISTER.

RALEIGH, N.C.

Wednesday, Oct. 29, 1863.

THE NEWS OF THE DAY.

A number of the most distinguished men in the State are gathering at Washington to look after the march of the army through the South. They are all made of the same stuff, and their only object is to get the South out of the war as quickly as possible. They are determined to do nothing that will hurt the South, and to keep the Union together at all hazards. They are all agreed in the belief that the South will be victorious in the end, and that the North will be humiliated and whipped.

The Southern States have already taken matters into their own hands, and have declared their independence. They have declared that the Union is no longer valid, and that it is time for the Southern States to stand alone. They have declared that the Union is a matter of convenience, and that it is time for the Southern States to stand alone. They have declared that the Union is a matter of convenience, and that it is time for the Southern States to stand alone.

The Southern States have declared that they are not going to waste another day on the war, but that they are going to take matters into their own hands, and that they are going to stand alone. They have declared that they are not going to waste another day on the war, but that they are going to take matters into their own hands, and that they are going to stand alone.

The Southern States have declared that they are not going to waste another day on the war, but that they are going to take matters into their own hands, and that they are going to stand alone. They have declared that they are not going to waste another day on the war, but that they are going to take matters into their own hands, and that they are going to stand alone.