THE REBEL DIVISIONS.

The following are a portion of the enemy's telegraph dispatches:

The rebel division of General Lynch, encamped on the north side of the North Branch of the Potomac, has got 2,000 men, and has three pieces of artillery. General Meade reports that this division is not expected to attack until the 18th, and that they will probably leave the vicinity of the Potomac the next day.

THE DRAFT.

It is expected that the draft will be called for in a few days. It is believed that no attempt will be made to draft men for the purpose of filling up the depleted ranks of the Michigan regiment, unless it can be shown that the men drafted will be required for the purpose of meeting the exigencies of the war.

THE SCHOONER FROlic.

The English schooner Frolic, with a cargo of cotton, arrived at New York last evening. The crew and officers are_personable, and the vessel is in good condition.

THE FIGHT AT THE PREMIUM.

The fight between the Confederates and the Union forces at the Premium, in Virginia, was reported to be over, and the rebels were said to have retreated towards the north.

THE POLICE IN MONTREAL.

A dispatch from Montreal, Canada, received this morning, states that the police in that city are in a state of readiness, and that they are prepared for any emergency that may arise.

THE PRIVILEGES OF THE CITIZEN.

The privilege of writing that our army is not to be interfered with by the enemy, is fully assured, and that the Constabulary of the United States is in a state of readiness to meet any emergency.

THE GOVERNMENT'S POLICY.

The Government is said to be postponing the publication of a proclamation, until it is determined what course to pursue in the matter of raising troops. The Government is said to be of the opinion that the war cannot be carried on without the aid of the people, and that the enlistment of volunteers is the best means of procuring the necessary troops.
